Press Release BIOB/2009/02 – 11th June 2009

BioBridge celebrates 20 years of innovation consultancy.....

BioBridge Ltd, the Cambridge-based independent life science innovation consultancy, was founded in 1989 and has been at the forefront of biotechnology and life science advances since then, from a ground-breaking report for Frost&Sullivan on biotechnology in animal breeding and production to current involvement in stimulating the latest in green and blue biotech, including metagenomics business prospects and bioenergy from the sea.

Mr Meredith Lloyd-Evans, CEO of BioBridge Ltd, said “Since we started, we have worked with over 100 clients from individuals to giant corporations through start-ups and SMEs to governments, spread over the world from Japan via Europe to the East coast of America. Our focus on innovation in Life Sciences means that we have been able to work with creative people and build strong advances in crop biotechnology, tissue engineering, animal health, medical devices and industrial biotechnology. We are very grateful to our clients for their support, especially our long-term relationships stretching from 6 to 18 years. Though our clientele is international, I’m also proud to have helped ERBI create its member purchasing scheme and provide the support to get this off the ground, to the benefit of my local biotech community, and also to have created productive links between Cambridge and Japan via work for JETRO. Mentoring and supporting entrepreneurs from the University has also been a satisfying pro bono activity.”

BioBridge looks forward to celebrating another 20 years of helping and supporting innovation and entrepreneurial endeavours when 2029 comes round!
